

'A Cronx Tale'

'A Cronx Tale' is an unapologetically, hard-hitting 18 minute animated film advising young people to look at their options and choose a different path to getting involved with gangs and crime.

This film has been created by a group of young Croydon residents in response to their lived experience and the world they see around them.

It is now available for educational settings, youth groups, voluntary and public sector services to purchase in order to help raise awareness about knife crime and gang culture for the children & young people with whom we work and live.

This film is suitable for showing to Year 6 and above as there are two versions of the film available for 14+ and one for 13 year olds and under.

Options available are:

- A 45-minute workshop in your setting to a group of young people where we show the film and have a discussion afterwards facilitated by one of our Outreach workers
- A set of 6 x weekly 45-minute workshops to the same group of young people each week facilitated by an Outreach worker who shows the film and runs the sessions to a lesson plan
- You buy the film, the lesson plan and a 1.5hr Train the Trainer session with the film-maker for your facilitators to prepare to deliver your own workshops

'A Cronx Tale' is a film written by Chardine Makaveli-Singh following a personal tragedy she experienced, illustrated with relatable images of a young black man living with his single parent Dad and how he is affected by his peers and knife crime. Sadly, this was a vivid illustration of the consequences and impact on the young person and family. The animation was beautifully simple and told the story without complications but some empathy. The film showed us how a child might be tempted by the security that gangs offer. The Q&A afterwards tragically reminded us that the funeral of 15 year-old knife crime victim Elianne Andam was held earlier that day. There are plans to introduce this accessible show into schools. It can't happen soon enough.
